The Pittsburgh Lamp.

is one of these inventions that seems to be finished. It seems to reach the end as to goodness of light in every way, and ease of management.

The only one that requires is filling and wiping.

Dirt falls out when the chimney is taken off, not into a pocket as in other central-draft lamps.

Putting in a new wick is a very matter indeed.

All this seems strange to one who knows how troublesome other good lamps are.

It is in all the good lamp stores. Send for a primer.

Pittsburgh, Pa. PITTSBURGH LAMP CO.

A BARREL OF ALCOHOL.

It Caused Consternation Among the Jolly Crowd When Opened.

"Years ago," said the roadmaster, as he settled back in his chair and pulled a cloud of blue smoke outward, "an incident occurred that depleted the force employed on the freight depot in proportion to an alarming degree. In fact, it had pretty near the same effect as a haunted-house fable does on a particularly nervous teamster. At last, after I speak of the men employed at the freight depot in question were a pretty respectable set. Most of them did not object to taking on 'little booze' even while on duty, and the opportunity to inhale the glowing spirits of intoxication often presented itself. The boys had discovered a scheme whereby they could keep themselves well supplied with liquor. Almost every day whiskey in barrels was stored in the depot. The scheme was to raise a hoop, bore a small hole in the barrel, take out a supply of liquor, plug up the hole and place the hoop back in position. Sometimes small hoops were bored in the top of a barrel and the lemonade straw would be brought into requisition.

"One day a barrel of alcohol consigned to this city, with no special specifications, was rolled into the warehouse. It remained there for several days and nobody cared for it. Finally little holes were bored in the head of the barrel and the men used straw to get the liquor into their stomachs. It was a great success. One by one the boys were let into the secret, and often a stray brakeman or flagman would be given a hospitable drink. The mode of getting at the alcohol began to grow tedious, however, and one day some one suggested that as no one intended to call for the barrel, it would facilitate matters to place it in the head. The suggestion was carried out.

"'What is the matter?' exclaimed a half-downer who was sitting around ready to 'roll the growler' at a moment's notice.

"'My God! there's a man in there,' said the growler, as he rolled out of the warehouse, 'and he's a pretty good fellow, too!'

"'Now come,' continued the roadmaster, as he ceased reflectively at the sight, 'there was a skeleton of a man in that barrel. There was no address on the barrel, but it had probably been assigned to some medical college or some student who had just finished his course of lectures. For a week every man about the freight depot was sick. The discovery of the skeleton in that barrel did more for the whiskey homes in this city than all the other agencies combined. Ever since then those fellows want to drink they cross over to the saloon and join for it.'

A Shrewd Doctor.

A celebrated German physician was called upon to treat an extraordinary complaint, the side effects of whose complaint was high living and lack of exercise. But it would never do to tell her so, so his medical advice ran thus, says the Chicago News:

"Arise at 5 o'clock, take a walk in the park for one hour, then drink a cup of tea, walk another hour and take a cup of chocolate. Take breakfast at 7.

"Her condition improved visibly until morning the carriage of the lady was seen to approach the physician's residence at lightning speed.

"The patient dashed up to the doctor's office and on his appearing of the scene she gasped out, 'Oh doctor, I took the chocolate first!'

"Then drive home as fast as you can," ejaculated the astute disciple of Esculap, readily writing a prescription, "and take this medicine. The tea must be underneath." The grateful patient complied. She is still improving.

Let's reason together. Here's a firm, one of the largest of the country over, the world over, it has grown, step by step, through years to greatness, and it sells solid medicine!—

"That's enough!"

"Wait a little."

"This firm pays the newspaper good money (expensive work, this advertising) to tell the people that they have faith in what they sell, so much faith that if they can't benefit or cure, they don't want your money. Their guarantee is not an indefinite and roundabout definite and absolute—if the medicine doesn't help, your money is 'topped'."

"Suppose every sick man and every feeble woman tried this medicine and found them worthless, who would be the loser, you or they?"

The medicine is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, for blood disease, and his "Favorite Prescriptions" for women's peculiar ills. If they help, it's not an indefinite and roundabout definite and absolute—if the medicine doesn't help, your money is 'topped'."
